Please share any feedback you have related to the conference live events.

1. great sense of community; with each session our level of comfort with sharing our thoughts/experiences grew.

2. Very similar to edtechtalk format. I caught a bit of the session hosted in NY.

3. Useful enjoyable converstation. Great moderator...

4. I am hoping to use some of these presentations with my staff.

5. none

6. I think the concept of the live events was great, I just couldn't fit any in!

7. Had to answer 'Neutral' to Live Events in Qs 7 and 10 as they were compulsory to answer in order to exit survey.

8. publish a Skype guide for people to encourage the use of proper equipment (headset mics) to keep background noise down. Can Skypecasts be made private to keep the passers by from just dropping in? Some were very disruptive.

9. For me elluminate was buggy behind a commercial firewall. With a proxy server, forget it. From home on a cable modem it is a nice tool.

10. Please just do this again.

11. I did not find the live events very stimulating. Liked the podcast with Sherry and Darren.

12. When night falls leaders need training on how to run a skype conversation. People kept coming into the rooms who didn't know what skype was and interrupting the conversations.

13. I wanted to participate more in the live events, but my personal schedule didn't allow that.

14. I appreciated the various adjustments you made based on feedback during/after these events. For example, the first fireside chat spent too much time having participants introduce themselves not leaving much time to interact with the facilitator and the other participants. This was adjusted for the remainder of the sessions. Overall, these live events were very inspirational, energizing and informative and provided a lot of food for thought. There were points I missed the first time through, but after reading some of the responses on the blogs, I went back and re-listened to them and learned even more.

15. I thought Sheryl did an especially good job leading the live events. She kept it focused. I thought it was exceptional that they were held to the time frame which I am sure was no easy task and the organizers worked so well together. An example was when Darren reminded Sheryl that the hour was coming to an end during the obstacle fireside chat - great teamwork!

16. They were fantastic - really too short. I think whenever you have that many people together with a presentation an hour is too short to be as interactive as we would all like.

17. Would have liked to have had fireside chat in smaller, more interactive groups.

18. The one event that I participated in was great. Loved every minute of it!!

19. the elluminate session was cool but I think more people would benifit from more specific skkypecasts.

20. Elluminate was great! Any to use it MORE next year? I realize it's not free...

21. Maybe adjust timings in some cases. For example, the Preconference chat took place at (I think) 2 am in GMT, which is not fair, and is also not good psychologically to make people feel excluded before the conference proper has even started!

22. I loved the When Night Falls event it was great to be able to dip into and out of relevant conversations throughout the day. Also great to meet new friends and forge new links.

23. These were very valuable and should continue.

24. Could do with a photo of the people talking,messaging. Add a bit more of the personal real touch to the chats.

25. I was thrilled to be able to network with educators that I had been reading and know they had some of the questions that I have. The conversations were great!

26. Excellent and inspirational forum for learning, sharing ideas, and networking.

27. I had trouble getting connected and staying connected to the pre-conference. Eventually gave up.

28. Glad they were archived on Elluminate so I could hear them later.

29. Thanks for doing this. I think that it is good that there was some discussion about the "dark side" of the conference because it is always there.

30. Elluminate was awesome. Still need to work on using Skype and tappedin.org together. Maybe find a program that can do it all....I know simple. ;)

31. It was exciting to be "in the room" with so many familiar names!

32. Some problems with connectivity Skypecast open to the public therefore moderation a challenge

33. FUN!

34. I plan on attending more live events next year. Hallway conversations are such an important part of f2f conferences; live events provided a space for some of this to occur.

35. great to be able to go back to

36. I found it exciting to be connected to and talking with people from around the world with a common vision of technology in education. This was my first experience with this type of study and I found it broadened my understanding of the possibilities available to the faculty at my school.

37. IT was fantastic getting to chat online and talk with people from all over the world doing what I am interested in.

38. The online events were very exciting for me. I got to "meet" several of my ed-tech heroes, and it was great to listen to people from all over the world. Just the fact that we could participate in such an activity was so interesting. I'd like to figure out how to incorporate something like that into our staff development and into our classrooms.

39. A great way to bring people together for the feel of a face to face conference.

40. Even with all the focus on collaboration, I was still very intimidated by the live events. I can't tell you how many times I clicked on the link for "When Night Falls" but could not get myself to join in. I wanted to listen in anonymously ("sit in the back of the room" as one of the presenters said.)

41. N/A

42. Loved 'em. I'd like to see more focused conversations take place during the conference -- for example, "break out" sessions on different topics -- might be a strand in and of itself.

43. See weaknesses above re time zones

44. I have not been about to attend any live events - I hope to catch some of "When night Falls" this weekend.

45. Fantastic!!

46. I think it would be good to have followed up each Elluminate fireside chat with an "afterglow" skypecast and Tapped-In conversation opportunity. I also think it would have been good to schedule two fireside chats per week, with one that catered more to timezones in Europe and Asia/Australia.
